A TALE: WITH A MORAL.

FOR THE REGISTER.—BY JOSEPHINE.

Once, a printer and a poet—here it goes! the world shall know it:
Printer man with head all bothered up with editorial lore:
Sooty printer, daubed with printer's ink, and dusty,
Musing o'er his labor only, working day and night all lonely,
While his mind, still young, grew rusty: grew, for want of love, all rusty.
Mused and worked, and nothing more.

But a change came o'er the vision of his heart, like sweet Elysium
Fabled of the gods that haunt some fair and mystic shore.
Thus the change was wrought: by fingers penning wild, sweet thoughts, that lingered
Round the poet's heart, and mingled through his dreams, all day and more.
For the verses were a lady's—beautiful with classic lore,
And he mused them o'er and o'er.

And all through the day's wild hurry, of the press-work and the worry,
Setting up the type, and so forth (printers reading this will know)
Oft his mind from labor wandered, and upon the verses pondered,
Till he thought and often wondered who the lady was that bore
Such an antique, pretty title, as were penned the verses o'er.
This he pondered o'er and o'er.

And at midnight, weak and weary, feeling sad at heart and dreary,
Forth he sought his bed of straw (or feathers—which, I do not know,—
Then a dream came o'er him stealing, with love's tender, radiant feeling,
And a vision of her lovely, saintly bright, his couch before;
Then he rose to clasp the vision which his dream had reveled o'er.
But—he fell upon the floor.

Morning dawned—and forth uprising, with a power of will surprising,
He snatched his hat and rushed from out the office door.
And he sought a quiet corner, where no prying eye could scorn him
—Scorn him of his work that morning, penning his sweet vision o'er,
In the words of love's own weaving, with the sunlight on the floor.
This he did—and nothing more.

Then he published his sweet poem, all the while he gladly knowing
That the subject of his vision oft would read the poem o'er;
But he knew her not, this vision of his last night's sweet elysium,
Whether young or old, her station, married, single, rich or poor;
But [illegible] hoped she'd answer the sweet message that in bore;
This he hoped, and nothing more.

The new Mining Law of California.

An Act Concerning Assessments upon Stock of Corporations.

SECTION 1. The Trustees of any corporation, formed under the general laws of this State, shall have power to levy and collect, for the purpose of paying the proper and legal expenses of such corporation, assessments upon the capital stock thereof, in the manner and form and to the extent hereinafter provided, and not otherwise.

SEC. 2. No assessment shall exceed five per cent. of the capital stock of the corporation, and none shall be levied while any portion of any previous assessment shall remain unpaid, or uncollected, except in cases where all the powers of the corporation shall have been exercised in accordance with the terms of this Act, for the purpose of collecting such previous assessments, and except, also, the collection of a previous assessment against one or more stockholders, restrained by injunction or otherwise, in which case, further assessment may be levied and collected according to this Act.

SEC. 3. No assessment shall be levied except by order of the Board of Trustees, concurred in by a majority of said Board, and entered upon the records of the corporation.

SEC. 4. Every order levying an assessment shall specify the amount thereof, and the time when, the person or persons to whom, and the place or places where, the same is payable. It shall also appoint a day for the advertisement of the delinquent list, which shall not be less than thirty nor more than thirty-five days from the time of the making of such order; and a day for the sale of delinquent stock, which shall not be less than ten nor more than twenty days from the time appointed for the advertisement of the delinquent list.

SEC. 5. Upon the making of such an order, the Secretary shall cause to be published immediately a notice thereof in the following form:

'[Name in full.] [Location of works.] Notice is hereby given, that at a meeting of the Trustees of said Company, held on the [date] an assessment of [amount] per share was levied upon the capital stock of said Company, payable [when, to whom, and where, particularly]. Any stock upon which said assessment shall remain unpaid on the [day fixed] will be advertised on that day as delinquent, and unless payment shall be made before, will be sold on the [day appointed] to pay the delinquent assessment, together with costs of advertising and expenses of the sale. [Signature of Secretary, with particular location of office.]'

SEC. 6. Said notice shall be published once each week for four successive weeks, in a daily or weekly paper, published in the place designated in the articles of incorporation as the principal place of business of the corporation, and also in some paper published in the county in which the works of the corporation are situated, if a paper be published therein; provided, that if the works of the corporation are not situated within some State or Territory of the United States, then publication in a paper of the county shall not be necessary; and provided, also, that if there is no paper regularly issued on Saturdays at any place where publication is required to be made, the notice may be published in every issue of the paper which is most frequently issued at such place, for the full period of four weeks; and provided, also, that if there is no newspaper published at that place designated as the principal place of business of the corporation, then the publication shall be made in the newspaper published nearest thereto; and provided, also, that the notice specified in the 5th section of this Act may be served by delivering a copy thereof, certified by the Secretary, to each stockholder personally, and in case of such service upon all the stockholders of said corporation, then no notice by publication shall be necessary, and such personal notice shall be deemed complete.

SEC. 7. If any portion of the assessment mentioned in said notice shall remain unpaid on the day specified therein for the publication of the notice of sale, the Secretary shall, unless otherwise ordered by the Board of Trustees, cause to be published in the same papers in which the notice provided for in section 5 shall have been published, a notice substantially in the following form:

'[Name in full.] [Location of works.] Notice.—There is delinquent upon the following described stock, on account of assessment levied on the [date] [and assessments levied previous thereto, if any,] the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective shareholders, as follows: [Names, number of certificates, number of shares, amount.] And in accordance with law, and an order of the Board of Trustees, made on the [date], if any such order shall have been made, so many shares of each parcel of said stock as may be necessary will be sold at the particular place, on the [date], at [the hour], of said day, to pay said delinquent assessments thereon, together with costs of advertising and expenses of the sale. [Name of Secretary, with particular location of office.]'

SEC. 8. Said last named notice shall state every certificate of stock separately, with the number of shares which it represents, and the amount due thereon, except where certificates may not have been issued to parties entitled thereto, in which case the number of shares, and the amount due thereon, together with the fact that the certificates for such shares have not been issued, shall be stated.

SEC. 9. Said notice, when published in a daily or weekly paper, or in both, shall be published as follows: When published in a daily paper, the same shall be published for a period of ten days, excluding Sundays and holidays, previous to the day of sale; when published in a weekly paper, the same shall be published for two weeks previous to the day of sale, the first publication in the weekly being at least fourteen days prior to the day of sale.

SEC. 10. By the publication of the said notices, as hereinbefore provided, the corporation shall acquire jurisdiction to sell and convey a full, complete, perfect and absolute title to all of the stock described in the notice of sale upon which any portion of the assessment or costs of advertising shall remain unpaid at the hour appointed for the sale, but shall sell no more of such stock than is necessary to pay the assessments due, and costs of sale.

SEC. 11. On the day and at the place, and as nearly as may be at the hour appointed in the notice of sale, the Secretary shall, unless otherwise ordered by the Board of Trustees, sell, or cause to be sold at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, so many shares of each parcel of said described stock as may be necessary to pay the assessment and charges thereon, according to the terms of said notice of sale, provided, that if payment be made before the time fixed for sale, the party paying shall only be required to pay the added cost of advertising.

SEC. 12. The person offering at such sale to pay the assessment and costs for the smallest number of shares, or fraction of a share, shall be deemed the highest bidder.

SEC. 13. The times fixed in any notice published according to the provisions, may be at once extended for a period of not more than ten days, by order of the Board of Trustees, duly made and entered on the records of the corporation; but no order extending the time for the performance of any act specified in any notice shall be effectual, unless notice of such extension or postponement be appended to and published with the notice to which the order relates, before the completion of the regular course of publication thereof.

SEC. 14. No assessment duly levied shall be rendered invalid by a failure to make proper publication of the notices hereinbefore provided for, nor by the non-performance of any act required to be performed in order to enforce the payment of the same; but in case of any substantial error or omission in the course of proceedings for collection, all previous proceedings, except the levying of the assessment, shall be void, and publication shall be begun anew.

SEC. 15. All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed: provided that such repeal shall not affect proceedings commenced for the collection of assessments heretofore levied, but all such assessments may be collected in accordance with the provisions of the laws then in force.

SEC. 16. This Act shall take effect immediately.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.—A young man of eighteen or twenty, a student in a University, took a walk one day with a professor, who was commonly called the young men's friend, for his kindness to [illegible].

While they were walking together, and the professor was seeking to lead the conversation to grave subjects, they saw an old pair of shoes lying in their path, which they supposed to belong to a poor man who was at work in a field close by, and who had finished his day's work.

The young student turned to the professor, saying: 'Let us play this man a trick; we will hide his shoes, and conceal ourselves behind those bushes, and watch to see his perplexity when he can not find them.'

'My dear friend,' answered the professor, 'we must never amuse ourselves at the expense of the poor. But you are rich, and you may give yourself a much greater pleasure by means of this poor man. Put a dollar into each shoe and then we will hide ourselves.'

The student did so, and then placed himself with the professor, behind the bushes close by, through which they could easily watch the laborer, and see whatever wonder or joy he might express.

The poor man had soon finished his work and came across the field to the path where he had left his coat and shoes. While he put on the coat he slipped one foot into one of his shoes; but feeling something hard he stooped down and found the dollar. Astonishment and wonder were seen upon his countenance, he gazed upon the dollar, turned it round and looked upon it again and again; then he looked around him on all sides, but could see no one. Now he put the money in his pocket and proceeded to put on the other shoe; but how great was his astonishment when he found in the other a dollar! His feelings overcame him; he fell upon his knees, looked up to Heaven, and uttered aloud a fervent thanksgiving, in which he spoke of his wife, sick and helpless, and his children without bread, whom this timely bounty from some unknown hand would save from perishing.

The young man stood there deeply affected, and tears filled his eyes.

'Now,' said the professor, 'are you not much better pleased than if you had played your intended trick?'

'O, dearest sir,' answered the youth, 'you have taught me a lesson that I will never forget. I feel now the truth of the words which I never before understood, 'it is better to give than to receive.''

A BRISK SCOTCH LASSIE.—At an examination in the case of a farmer in a Scotch court, on his sister entering the box to be examined, the following conversation took place between her and the opposing agent:

'How old are you?' asked the lawyer.

'O well, sir, I'm an unmarried woman, and I dinna think it richt to answer that question.'

'O, yes, inform the gentleman how old you are,' said the Judge.

'Weel a weel, I'm fifty.'

'Are you not more?'

'Weel, I'm sixty.'

The inquisitive lawyer still further asked if she had hopes of getting married; to which Miss Jane replied: 'Weel, sir, I winna surely tell a lie; I hinna lost hope yet.' And she scornfully added: 'But I wudna marry you, for I'm sick and tired of your palaver already.'

Pat was a volunteer, and he got sick. The first question the surgeon asked him was: 'Pat, are your bowels regular?' 'No, sir; be jabers, I'm a volunteer!'

Ik Marvel on his Farm.

The following 'horse trade' is recorded in Ik Marvel's new book. One of the conditions of making money by a farm is the necessity of a constant dickering, a duty which was not at all to his taste, and which he endeavored to shirk as far as possible by handing it over to his shrewd foreman. But sometimes a customer arrives who insists on talking with the 'boss.'

Such a one had dropped in, on a morning in which you happen to be deeply engaged. He wishes to 'take a look' at a horse which he has seen advertised for sale. The stable is free to his observation, and the attentive Pat is at hand; but the customer wants to talk with the 'Squire.'

It is a staunch Canadian horse, for which you have no further use. You paid for him, six months ago, a hundred and fifty dollars, and you now name a hundred dollars as his price. I never yet met a man who sold a horse for as much as he gave—unless he were a jockey; I never expect to.

'Mornin', Squire.'

'Good morning.'

'Bin a lookin' at yer hoss.'

'Ah!'

'Middlin' lump of a hoss.'

'Yes, a nice horse.'

'D'n know as you know it, but sich hosses an't so salable as they was a spell back.'

'Ah!'

'They're gittin' a fancy for bigger hosses.'

Silence.

'Put that pony to a heavy cart, and he wouldn't do nothin'.'

'You are mistaken; he's a capital cart horse.'

'Well, I don't say but what he'd be handy with a lightish load. Don't call him a spavined, do ye?'

'No; perfectly sound.'

'That looks kinder like a spavin;' rubbing his hind off leg. 'An't much of a hoss doctor, be ye?'

'Not much.'

'Don't kick, dooz he?'

'No.'

'Them little Kanucks is apt to kick.'

Silence and an impatient movement, which I work off by pulling out my watch.

'What time o' day's got to be?'

'Eleven.'

'Thunder! I must be agoin'—should like to trade, Squire, but I guess we can't agree. I s'pose you'd be askin' as much as—sixty—or—seventy dollars for that ere hoss—wouldn't ye?'

'A hundred dollars is the price, and I gave fifty more.'

'Don't say? Give a thunderin' sight too much, Squire.'

'Pat, you may put up the horse; I don't think the gentleman wants him.'

'Look o'here, Squire—ef you was to say—something like—seventy, or—seventy-five dollars—now there might be some use in talkin'.'

'Not one bit of use,' (impatiently)—turning on my heel.

'——Say, Squire, ever had him to a plow?'

'Yes.'

'Work well?'

'Perfectly well.'

'Fractious any? Them Kanucks is contrary critters when they've a mind to be.'

'He is quite gentle.'

'That's a good p'int; but them that's worked till they git quiet, kinder gits the spirit lost out on 'em—an't so brisk when you put 'em to a wagin. Don't you find it so, Squire?'

'Not at all.'

'How old, Squire, did you say he was?'

'Seven.'

'Well, I guess he is; a good many figgers nigher that than he is to tew—any way.'

'Patrick, you had better put this horse up.'

'Hold on, Squire,' and taking out his purse, he counts out—'seventy—eighty—and a five—and two—and a fifty—there, Squire, 'tan't worth talkin' about; I'll split the difference with ye, and take the hoss.'

'Patrick, put him up.'

At which the customer is puzzled, hesitates as the horse is entering the stable again, when he breaks out explosively:

'Well, Squire, here's your money; but you're the most thunderin' oneasy man for a dicker I ever traded with—I'd say that for ye.'

And the horse is transferred to his keeping.

'S'pose you throw in the halter and blanket, don't ye?'

'Give him the halter and blanket.'

'And, Patrick, you an't got nary curry-comb you don't use, you can let me have?'

[illegible] him a curry-comb, Pat.'

'Nearly.'

'Well, I'm glad on't. Had kinder ketchin' weather up this way.'

A ROMANTIC ROBBER.—In Memphis, Tennessee, one night lately, a lady was aroused from her sleep by feeling the weight of a man's hand pressed upon her mouth so that she could make no noise. On looking on her assaulter, she saw a man dressed in a cloak and cap, and having a curtain of black silk, with eye-holes in it, hung over his face. A companion was pressing a sponge, saturated with chloroform, to the nose and mouth of her husband, rendering him helpless and unconscious. Upon promising that she would be quiet, her mouth was released. Then the man, in the politest manner imaginable, apologised for his intrusion, and the sad necessity that drove him to this rude way of raising a loan. He would trouble her, he said, for her jewelry and money, and any small articles of plate that might be handy. His accomplice soon ramaged the house, picking up what valuables he could find, leaving the polished villian to watch the lady and prevent her from raising the house. After the various articles were secured, he gracefully drew a couple of diamond rings from her fingers, complimenting her upon the beauty of her hand, and finally imprinting a kiss lightly upon her lips, withdrew. It is charming to be robbed in this manner—that is, charming for the ladies, but rough on the husband, for the scamps carried off some five hundred dollars' worth of property.

SWELL AND SHRINK.—There resides in Hokha (for State, vide Gazetteer) a witty old Canadian Frenchman, named Peter Doney. Now, Peter can neither read nor write, but manages to have an opinion on most subjects, and is withal glibe with his tongue. Some Winters ago Peter joined the village Lyceum, and took an active part in its grave discussions. There belonged to the Lyceum a young man, Tom Johnson, who was always poking fun at old Peter; and on one occasion had called Peter to order a number of times. Peter bore it for some time with all the patience of a martyr; but at last becoming tired of it, he turned to the Chairman, with a peculiar twinkle in his eye, and exclaimed:

'Mr. Chairman, de gentleman ob de oder side remind me very mooch ob one bas-wood board. He swell and he shrink a great deal more dan der is of him in de fust place!'

Tom subsided, with the remark—sotto voce—'I accept the gentleman's apology.' The audience cheered, and Peter was permitted to finish his remarks without further interruption.

In Germany a princess goes into the kitchen, and she does not become the less distingue in her circle because she knows how everything ought to be done below, and can rap the cook on the knuckles the next morning over the cabinet council because this or that dish or entree was damaged; and she will have it better for the future. Some such idea has seized the English, and it is not the worst reform of the day.

The saying of a White Mountain stage driver to a New Yorker sitting with him—'I s'pose if I went to New York I should gawk round just as you folks do up here!' [illegible]

BRAZIL.—The Empire of Brazil is growing with a rapidity unexampled in the history of South America. Her products are chiefly of raw material; her imports comprehend the whole catalogue of manufactures. She has grown so vastly within a short space as to have secured for herself steam communication with Europe; she is growing daily with an increased power by reason of large immigration from England and the mediterranean, in part, although the bulk arrives from Germany. A glance at the map will show what fifty years may be reasonably expected to do for her. Stretching from the fifth degree of north latitude to the thirty third degree south, and thus containing the most favorable climate on the globe for staple agricultural products; extending from the 7th degree of east longitude to the forty-second, having a territory of three millions nine hundred and fifty-six thousand square miles, or about one million in excess of the United States; with a population, in 1854, of 7,000,000; drained through all the northern section by the magnificent navigable waters of the Amazon, which, having their fountains rolled by the ashes of Cotopaxi; or bearing the alluvium of Bolivia and the Argentine Confederation; or swollen by those tides which are poured through the Tapajoz, the Chingu and the Tocamoins, sweep into the Atlantic, at a distance of more than two thousand miles from their source—opened and irrigated, also, by the Parana, the Paraguay, the San Francisco, and many more important streams—producing gold, copper, platina, and diamonds, in its mineralogy; sugar, coffee, cotton, rice, tobacco, dyestuffs, drugs, costly woods and caoutchouc in its agriculture, besides hides and gums of great value, and importing nearly every article which requires skill and capital for its manufacture—need we say more to prove that the value of such a country demands the attention of capitalists and legislators of our own?—Phila. North American.

THE CLOSE OF THE WEEK.—These Saturday nights are the world's most genial half-way houses; the arbor, with its welcome shade of the Summertime; the old-fashioned fire-place, with blazing logs, of a Winter's night that is windy and stormy and lonely; the place to stop at and be at rest; to court at and be happy in, shutting up the business of the week like a safe, or a book with the addition of lock and key. Heaven pity those who have no homes to go to of a Saturday night—no place to lounge in, comforted with the thought that on the morrow they may be their own property, in spite of employers, and in spite of their own ledgers! Home, just then, is Heaven, almost; it is the concentrated genius of all that poets and painters, with pen and brush, have said about it, bearing in mind the sweet song of poor Payne and not forgetting the pity for him which should show itself at such a time because he never had a home. Eternity's ages are shorter than the weeks of Time; gray hairs should almost follow the setting of a Saturday night's sun, remembering the work of the week and its bearing upon our after life. Time moves on, but after death there is no time; God only can comprehend the space of the great hereafter. And so, as we mark these great weeks by almanac and clock, we are living centuries; our work of a week, trivial and great, sends its influence, for or against, through all the centuries which will not be recorded. May it be so with us all, that after the brief candle of our existence has gone down in the socket of the grave, we may rise from this last Saturday night to that better life which is a never ending Sabbath, a rest perpetual and a happiness so great that the whole world can not hold it.

A YANKEE NOTION.—An American capitalist came to me not many months since, says a sculptor, and opened the conversation by saying: 'Sir, your name is Robson.' I admitted that my name was Robson. 'And you are a statuary,' said he. I admitted this fact, also, submitting sculptor. 'Sir,' continued he, 'I will give you a commission.' I bowed, and begged him to be seated. 'Robson, sir,' said he, drawing a paper from his pocket, 'I am a remarkable man. I was born in the environs of Boston city, and began life by selling matches at five cents the bunch. I am worth, at this moment, one million o' dollars.' I bowed again, and said I was glad to hear it. 'Sir,' he went on to say, 'how I airned that million o' dollars—how from selling matches I came to running of errands; to taking care of a hoss; to trading in dogs, tobaccos, cottons, corns and segars; and how I came to be the man I am, you'll find all made out on this paper, dates and facts correct.' Sir, it's a very re-markable statement.' I replied that I had no doubt of it. 'But that I could not quite see what it [illegible] in Rome—a pillar with a pro[illegible] [illegible] all around it, and a figure up at the top. I think you call it Trajan's column. Now, Robson, sir, I wish you to make me one exackly like it—same hight, same size, and money no object. You shall re-present my career in all my va-ri-ous trades a-twisting round the column, beginning with the small chap selling matches at five cents the bun-dle, and ending with a full length figger of me on the summit, with one hand thus, in my bo-som, and the other under my coat-tails!'

MISTOOK HIS MEANING.—The S. F. Sunday Mercury is responsible for the following:

To show how strangely some people are in the habit of misconstruing the language of others, since the simplest words of the English dialect have been tortured into slang phrases, we will just relate a little circumstance which took place on the street, a short time since, between a very popular and worthy minister of the Gospel and a lady. We merely repeat the little matter in hope that it may tend to remedy the vulgar practice, which has become rather the rule than the exception among all classes and sexes, of misconstruing innocent words. It is as follows: A lady, of prepossessing demeanor, was passing along Montgomery street, and, being a stranger, we presume, to the city, asked of a reverend gentleman, whom she chanced to meet, 'Can you inform me, sir, which is Montgomery street?' 'Madam,' observed the gentleman, with a profound bow, 'You are on it.' 'Indeed, sir,' replied the lady, with indignation flashing in her eyes; 'you are vastly mistaken! How dare you speak to me in that manner?' The reverend gentleman was almost consumed by blushes when he found how his language had been interpreted, and before he could explain its proper meaning, the lady was sailing down the street, tossing her head from side to side as if she intended to deal out destruction on creation in general.

Other nations pray for rain, as we do. In a season of great drouth in Persia, a schoolmaster at the head of his pupils marched out of Schiraz in procession, to pray for rain. A stranger asked whither they were going. The tutor told him, and said—'He doubted not that God would listen to the prayers of these innocent children.' 'My friend,' said the traveler, 'If that were the case, I fear there would be no schoolmasters left alive.'

The city of Quito is 9,520 feet above the level of the sea; the city of Mexico, 7,400; the city of Micuipamba, 11,830; also the following places, situated between the two chains of Andes, in Upper Peru, at some 350 miles distance from the Pacific: City of Puno, 12,830 feet above the sea; town of Potosi, 13,350; mines of Potosi, 16,000; Titicaca Lake, 12,760; house of Titiaca, 14,402.

We think it is an undeniable truth that the Africans, let them go to what part of the world they may, retain more unequivocally than any other people the odor of nationality.

There are only two sides to the question.—Every man must be for the United States or against it. There can be no neutrals in this war—only patriots or traitors.—DOUGLAS.

SAN FRANCISCO ADVERTISERS are referred to L. P. FISHER, Agent, 629 Washington street—nearly opposite Maguire's Opera House.

THE WILSON, in Echo, is working two shifts of men, and making good progress into the mountain.

FREIGHT TEAMS over the Honey Lake route begin to file in, bringing lumber, 'shakes,' potatoes and bacon.

RECORDER OF BUENA VISTA DISTRICT.—A notice from the Deputy calls for a meeting, at 5 p. m. next Monday, to elect a Recorder—as by law required.

BULLION.—Shipped by Wells, Fargo & Co., Monday's stage, 290 ounces bullion, result of a lot of ore from the 'Gem,' worked at the Lang Syne mill.

GOOD SEASON FOR STOCK.—The late rains and sunshine have brought out a fine growth of grass in the cañons and on the mountain sides. Stock is reveling in rich feed.

'DOWNEY COSOLIDATED' is now working two shifts of hands. Rock grew harder this week, requiring some blasting. Works well, though, and the men are making good headway.

ANOTHER STRIKE IN STAR.—We learned, yesterday, that the workmen in the 'Trinity' company's tunnel had just struck a two-feet ledge of very rich ore. Did not learn any particulars.

THE CALIFORNIA MINING LAW.—On 1st page will be found the regulations imposed, by the late California Legislature, upon mining companies incorporated under the laws of that State. Owners will do well to preserve a copy for reference.

EXPRESS TO JORDAN AND BOISE.—Cutler, of Star City, is putting stock on the route to run express between the Humboldt towns and the Jordan Creek and Boise mines. Cutler has his eyes about him. This is the shortest route for all California and the Territory; and has an abundance of grass and water almost the entire distance.

RAIN.—Tuesday evening clouds gathered thick, and a few scattering drops flew on the wind. On Wednesday, we were refreshed with a very pleasant shower, and all day the clouds seemed on the point of bursting. The weather all the week has been cool. Early yesterday morning the sun made a dash, but retired within his lines again, and kept up only a scattering fire during the day.

SUICIDE.—Ah Sing, a Chinawoman, tired of life, rashly importunate, and so forth, bought a dose of some useful drug, Wednesday, and gobbled it down; and made no sign, but died. A sorrowful-visaged countryman of the deceased—Ah Sup by name—thus gives voice, in the language of the Children of the Sun, to the great affliction which is on him:

> Co low kum tong, as hee Ah Sing!
> Tico della taw wee-lup co-chow:
> Hi hum as sow Tung-Ching;
> Dul lee song big glassl,
> Lieo no mea cat—gone die!

THE FED. ASSESSOR.—Ah! have you seen him? He is around making affectionate inquiries as to the pecuniary condition and prospects of his fellow citizens, and making an occasional note of the facts as he gathers them. It is his intention to thus inquire concerning the temporal welfare of every citizen. If any be passed by, let them attribute the seeming [illegible]

ON THE WAY TO BOISE.—Hundreds of people, with all sorts of rigs, are continually passing up the river to Jordan Creek and Boise. From Carson, Virginia, and all parts of California, they are coming, in a constant stream. This is the shortest route, with the easiest grade, and people seem generally to have found it out. Plenty of grass, water, and wood, along the route. There will be a great recoil in this flood of emigration. Disappointments await the bulk of this tide of fortune-seekers. In about three months they will be thronging back. The people who went out for gold will be back for silver.

DROWNED.—D. H. Williams, Justice of the Peace for Lake Township, held an inquest, 21st inst., at the house of Fenslow & Co., Big Meadows, on the body of a man named John Harper. The coroner's jury found, by the testimoney of witnesses, that deceased was a native of Ohio, formerly residing within 30 miles of Mansfield, in that State; that he stopped, the night of 27th March, at the house of Wickel and brother, having a 2-horse team; that he acted strangely, and disappeared in the night, and was not seen or heard of afterwards, till a Piute Indian found the body, 21st inst., in the slough; that deceased was 30 to 40 years of age, and came to his death by accidental drowning, during temporary insanity.

> 'Far up the blue sky, a fair rainbow unrolled
> Its soft-tinted pinions of purple and gold.
> 'Twas born in a moment, yet, quick as its birth,
> It had stretched to the uttermost ends of the earth;
> And, fair as an angel, it floated as free,
> With a wing on the earth and a wing on the sea.'

It was Wednesday afternoon; and the most beautiful, perfect, and enduring spectacle of the sort we ever witnessed. It did not stretch to the uttermost ends of the earth; but spanned our beautiful cañon like a triumphal arch: right base resting on the 'United States' and the left on the 'National' ledge [doesn't that strike you as a good omen?]—the mountain side distinctly seen through a section of its purple and gold at each base of the arc. Following an exultant reflection on the good omen, came a recollection of the pot of gold which the fairy tale hangs at the rainbow's end; and, for this once, we credited the fairy tale: for have we not seen substantial evidences that the gold is in the 'National & Downey' to fill many a pot?

BULLION.—Ewing & Washburn sent off, on Thursday's stage, 673 ounces 'Gem' bullion, worth $951. Worked at the Lang Syne mill.

Our New Year.

Our lives are made up, not of time, but of events—incidents with which we here and there illustrate the way, and by which we in the same time live varied lives. This bright morning, last one of fickle April, we celebrate the birth-day of The Humboldt Register. A year ago, the publication of a newspaper in Humboldt county was an experiment involving serious doubt. It is still an experiment; but some promise of success begins to dawn. The mineral wealth of this region is slowly but steadily developing. The country is enjoying a gradual but healthy growth. As such a growth is in other things, we trust it is in this—the assurance of a vigorous maturity. Confident in the latent wealth of Humboldt, we cast our chance for fortune on the sterile sands which, Hope tells us, will ere long be laved by the flood-tide of industrial prosperity.

Looking back over the past year, we see much to encourage those who have taken their chance in this bleak region. The old system of dishing up deeds and stock certificates, representing unprospected claims, and on these evidences of poverty besieging the stock markets and provision stores, has passed into disrepute and disuse. By unanimous voice it has been agreed, that the rich ledges which rib these mountains shall be opened; that their treasures shall not be hawked and cried on the streets, on the dubious guarantee of top-croppings, but shall be cleft from the mountain's heart and turned into the channels of the business world's trade—that Humboldt mining stocks shall no longer be a drug in the market and a by-word on the corners.

It has been discovered, that the mining interest is not wholly dependent on the climate of Montgomery street; that labor can do much, with little aid of capital, to bring good claims in proper light before the world's eye. Good work has been done and still progresses. Many companies will soon be taking out sufficient metal from their claims to pay the expense of properly opening their mines. As they arrive at this stage of comparative independence, capital seeks investment in their stocks, and the clouds break from overhead.

Mills are wanted. Ores are coming out now in quantity to demand the steady stroke of a thousand stamps more than are up in the country. A great many companies have, with little money, brought their ledges into such shape that they could now be turning out a steady stream of good rock; but they find a lack of milling power; and are not able to build for themselves. But this deficiency we are assured, will in part be supplied the incoming season. Several mills are soon to be put up, in different parts of the county.

We have endeavored, the past year, laboring under many disadvantages, to give the outside world fair and truthful accounts of what was found, what was doing, and what was likely to be the result, in our rich, desert-bound county. Have studied to give facts—to put them in promising light, if possible—but on no account to publish as fact what was not such.

Those who took an interest, a year ago, in encouraging our enterprise at its outset, have lost in zeal. They are of opinion, probably, that if any good is in a paper it ought to be able to show enough of it in a year to guarantee its own success thereafter. We concur; and commence with such subscribers as have paid or as we know will pay on once asking. Our rates will not pay for canvassing the county for subscribers. Any who wish to take the paper on such recommendation as its past usefulness affords, will be accommodated by giving their names, with the subscription price, to any agent.

The Register this morning is printed on fine new type, and, our vanity says, makes as fine an appearance as most of papers printed the other side of the desert.

A HAPPY THOUGHT.—Our war correspondent tells us of a remarkable case of presence of mind on the part of a Federal officer in a Southern city: The city had not been loyal a great while, and the ladies in particular—although they had taken the iron-clad oath—hadn't yet got it well worked in. The theater was crowded. The officer now serving as our hero was behind the scenes. In the performance of some piece of diablerie, fire caught in the scenery, and threatened a sweeping conflagration. The audience was very large, and in a general scramble for the doors [illegible] amongst the actors and actresses—rings down the drop—and quietly orders 'John Brown' on full orchestra. The brass pieces and the big fiddles, the screaming fife and the spirit-stirring drum respond, in a volume that would have warmed the fat around the heart of William Lloyd Garrison. Before the band has got to the second turn, out goes the belle of the ton; and out they all go; and soon there's not a petticoat to be seen. The men, of course, follow their wives and sweethearts; and soon, while the actors have put out the fire and the orchestra kept the unusual noise from being heard, the house is emptied. The officer makes a great hit, and is thereafter the lion of the city.

THE COURTESY OF EXCHANGE.—A large, an excellent weekly paper, published in San Francisco and called The Bulletin, comes to us marked 'Please ex.' In that same establishment is published a large daily. That's why we don't 'please ex.' Would be glad to exchange our best for our neighbor's—but will not be put off with the cold victuals left over from feasting his more favored brethren. He publishes a paper to sell for money's worth; so do we. Considering the expense of his daily, our little weekly were a small return for it. But we do not look in that way on this business of newspaper exchange. We like to see the proposition come as you hail a friend on a pleasant morning after you have slept well: 'Good morning, old boy! Glad to see you looking so well!' giving your whole hand, in a hearty grip and a generous shake. Do it so, or pass without touching palms at all. Don't scan your man, nor your paper; to see what his clothes cost, instead of what he's worth, and then, pharisaically saying to yourself 'I am better than thou,' extend two lazy digits reluctantly, for his grasp. That slight can not be put upon us.

'THE NEVER-SWEATS.'—That is the dry sobriquet given here to people from Honey Lake. It is so easy to get a living there, that people acquire indolent habits, we suppose. Well, that will do to introduce our anecdote, anyhow. A man advertised for three able-bodied men. People who advertise get everything they want, and in a few days three men—stout fellows—came in company, and applied for the place. 'Ready to commence to-morrow?' he asked. 'Yes,' said the spokesman of the trio. 'Oh, I forgot! where have you come from?' 'From Honey Lake,' they replied. 'Honey Lake be d——d!' said he, as he walked off, 'what did you suppose I wanted? I want men to work. Honey Lake!' and he would not hear another word.

LOCALS.—For two reasons, but few strictly local items are given in these columns. Firstly, scarcely anything happens. Secondly, people who happen to be about when anything does happen, happen invariably to be interested parties, who don't want it 'put into the papers.' We like to give locals, but they're hard to get; and when we do give one, whether founded on fact or purely fictitious, somebody is certain to be offended. It is discouraging. Once, when we were doing a paper a long way off from these sagelubrious fields, we had a sort of second-assistant, or out-runner, who picked up items in the rough, and brought us the accounts to be sand-papered down; the naked truth, as he saw or heard it, to be garnished with such phrase and homily as our imagination might approve. He was a very enterprising man, of Irish parentage, but born in Eniskillen. He was faithful to a fault, and away into it, generally. If any body got married, or hurt, or died, or born, he saw in the occurrence only a kind dispensation of Providence, to furnish forth an item; and all was one to him, whether it was 'born,' 'married,' or 'died.' He gathered them in.

He was, as we have said, 'an enterprising young man,' &c.; but, comparatively speaking, 'enterprising' was no name for it. Storms had no terror for him, and sun-strokes leveled at his head proved abortions. The duller the times, the more his spirit rose superior to what was the matter. He was 'very enterprising,' you might say, the same as you might say a twenty-dollar piece is 'very goldy.' Well, he served up in oral shape, one Friday evening, the account of the birth of a boy to a respectable citizen. The paper was out next morning, and all over the town. Soon we had a call from the reputed father of the reported boy. Had a hard time getting out of the scrape, though explaining our innocence with the above plausible account. It turned out that this enterprising assistant local of ours had been trying to 'keep cases' on such items, so as to have the start of the other paper; and he had done it. The lady in the case was sick that Friday evening, and our enterprising young man had seen the doctor go there without any stomach-pump under his arm; and he made a close guess. The affair was postponed, however, for a day or two—and, as luck comes in bundles, the child born unto that indignant sick woman was a girl! That girl grew to be a pretty creature, and very smart; and we could never look on her without inwardly giving thanks for the correction of sex after the paper was out. Her mother never forgave us, and her indignation only caromed, instead of centering, as it ought, upon our enterprising young man.

THE PRESS.—Neglected, last week, to notice appearance of The Como Sentinel—a publication just commenced in the new town of Como, Lyon county, this Territory. Weston & Abraham, publishers, make it a very respectable paper, deserving a good support.

The Washoe Star, successor to Lovejoy's paper in Washoe City, made its bow the 16th, but reached us only a few days ago. It is not enough different from the old paper to materially damage it, and we hope the Washoites will accord it a liberal patronage. E. B. Wilson, publisher.

The Old Piute, transplanted from Washoe City, sprung upon the Virginia community on the evening of the 18th. Published daily, omitting Sundays—for it's published by Lovejoy, you know. The old injun made a grand salaam in the initial number, and explained away all necessity for a continuance of the other papers of the Territory—so:

> We calculate to concentrate in the Old Piute all of the bravery of the Enterprise, the consistency of the Union, the egotism of the Gold Hill News, the conceit of the Carson Independent, the stupidity of the Bulletin, the waggery of the Humboldt Register, the dryness of the Aurora Times, and the utter worthlessness of the Reese River Reveille, and if this combination of peculiar talent don't set us up, why, in we go, and we hope some friend will exclaim 'rest quiet, cat, in peace!'

Two more dailies announced as about to commence existence—one at Gold Hill, the other at Sacramento.

ONCE MORE.—Bro. Byrne gives the Menken one more notice—by way of answer to correspondent; thus:

> ENTHUSIAST.—The Menken, as you suppose, is a woman. Her acting is of a muscular character. She does 'Mazeppa,' 'French Spy,' 'Lola Montez,' 'Jack Sheppard,' and other moral pieces, and has done Heenan and [illegible] rides for the 'boys,' and writes for the Golden Era, off issues with Ada Clare. Like Brigham Young, she is considerably married.

A DUEL took place at Austin, on the 20th, between Billy Mulligan and Tom Coleman. Each emptied a navy revolver. Coleman wounded in thigh and finger. Mulligan not touched.

TEN DOLLARS DISCOUNT ON A RADICAL.—A settler in this county, evidently democratic bred, wanted to get a good saddle, bridle, and spurs. He had no acquaintance in Carson, where is the nearest saddlery establishment. He had been introduced to Governor Nye, and liked his appearance—but had some misgivings as to the propriety of troubling him with such a commission. At length, wanting his saddle and other rig very badly, he decided to write to the Governor. He did so—stating his lack of acquaintance in Carson, and his unwillingness to trouble His Excellency with such a matter; but he wanted to send money to buy the articles, and couldn't trust everybody. Few Republicans he would trust in that way, &c.; but as the Gov. had an honest face, he sent, inclosed, $50, to buy the rig. It was a compliment to the Gov., at the expense of his party, and of course passed as an excellent quality of soft-soap. But that didn't end it. The envelop showed signs of having been broken open; and a postscript explained what for. It read thus:

'P. S.—Since writing the above, I have been informed that you are a radical. I send $40, instead of $50, to get that rig. You can get a pretty good rig for forty dollars.'

A SATISFACTORY EXPLANATION.—Sitting in a saloon, Sunday evening, waiting, as usual, for the church bell to ring, SEMBLINS picked up this item. A rough sort of fellow from the Big Meadows, whose appearance suggested 'retired on half-pay from some unproductive ranch,' sat on the other side of the stove, making it all red in the shadow of his Bardolphian nose. He enlightened the company with sketches historical of his family in Arkansas. 'Had one cussed mean brother-in-law,' he went on to say; 'got him by accident. The fellow worked in the old man's clearin a month, and the old fool paid him cash—a thing unpresidented in that region, and would have got the old fel confisticated and lynched, if it had worked out. Unfortunately, it didn't work out. The fellow got stuck after the transaction, and nothin would do but he must marry into the family. Me and brother Bill was too young, and the old folks was married; and the fellow married sister Liz.; and that's how the family come to be cursed with him as a ornery member ever since.'

THINGS WANTED.—Pity it is, that within the fifteen years that envelops have been used on all letters, some enterprising manufacturer of paper has not fallen upon the idea of lining the 4th page of his letter paper, and making the paper of a size to fold squarely and fill the Government envelop.

Stages from Virginia coming loaded with passengers—old citizens returning, and Californians coming to see if anything good can be here.

STAR OMNIBUS.—TRIP 10.

Many old settlers have returned, and more arriving daily; all with unshaken faith in their feet. Lumber arriving in large quantities from Honey Lake. Meets with ready sale; as a great amount of building is to be done this Summer.

A workman in the 'Morning Star' tunnel, Humboldt City, met with a severe accident by the premature discharge of a blast, breaking one of his legs in two places and bruising him up generally. Two of his fingers had to be amputated.

Truly, virtue hath its reward! The ladies of this place, overwhelmed with gratitude to O'Bannon, for his very praiseworthy effort to have the moral tone of this paper raised, have made a presentation; accompanied with a neat little speech, in which they hoped and trusted he would not flag nor falter till the reformation shall be complete; and that when the task was completed, he would try his hand on the female portion of the aborigines of this country, who are becoming fearfully demoralized.

While the reformation of the paper is going on, let me suggest that Births, Marriages, and Deaths, be announced as Arrivals, Consolidations, and Departures; which, I think, would suit the most fastidious.

Another large shipment of Sheba ore this week, via Honey Lake. Increasing the force in this mine every week.

De Soto, American Basin, Perigord, and Trinity [illegible] driving ahead.

The Gander Club is in a flourishing condition. Struck it rich, and expecting a dividend soon. The Chairman presides. His benignant countenance and venerable head won him that enviable position. A committee is out collecting oyster cans, from which to get the material for the manufacture of a medal, to be ready in case of a sudden close of the session, or a resignation of the 'Great Gander;' for everybody 's bound to go the whole goose or none. If you don't think it 's true, ask

THE DRIVER.

SIMMONS says the man who allows himself to feel gloomy because the weather is so, or gets the blues because the times are dull or he 's unfortunate, is like the man who prepares his coat for wearing by hanging it out in the rain.

POINT.—See, on 1st page, a fine contribution in this line, from an old contributor, over a new nom de plume. Another on file.

A joker on hearing that certain persons were mutilating the copper cent, by cutting out the head and wearing it as a breast-pin or badge, at once suggested the following definition: 'Copperhead—one who outrages the good cents of the nation.'

Misery is the crucible into which destiny casts a man when she desires a scoundrel or a demigod.

Society is the atmosphere of souls; and we unnecessarily inhale from it something either healthful or infectious.

Everything will be conducted in the best possible style, while the table will be furnished at all times, with the best the market affords.

A supply of the finest liquors and choicest brands of cigars always on hand at the Bar.

The proprietor, an old stand by of the country, has erected this hotel, not so much for Star as it is, which would not justify the outlay, as for the city it soon is to be; and he respectfully informs the public, and all whom it may concern, that MILLER'S HOTEL is, and is going to be the hotel of the place all the time.

N. B.—Excellent Stabling accommodations immediately adjoining. Case's stages to Dun Glen leave the hotel immediately after the arrival of the California coach.

SPRING.

The bursting buds look up,
To greet the sunlight, while it lingers yet
On the warm hill-side—and the violet
Opens its azure cup,
Meekly, and countless wild flowers wake to fling
Their earliest incense on the gale of Spring.

Continual songs arise
From universal nature—birds and streams
Mingle their voices, and the glad earth seems
A second Paradise!
Thrice blessed Spring! thou bearest gifts divine!
Sunshine, and song, and fragrance—all are thine.

Nor unto earth alone—
Thou hast a blessing for the human heart,
Balm for its wounds and healing for its smart,
Telling of Winter flown,
And bringing hope upon thy rainbow wing,
Type of Eternal Life—thrice blessed Spring.

To-morrow may be dark with rain and gloom—
Fear not, but take with thanks the present hour;
To-day all pleasures in profusion bloom;
To-day no tempests lower.

A New England in the South.—A Knoxville letter predicts that the mountain region of East Tennessee and Western North Carolina, which separates the grain-growing and cotton-growing regions, is destined to become a second New England as a manufacturing country. It has abundant water power to turn all the water spindles of the United States. Wool can be grown at half the cost at which it is produced in New England, as there is pasturage the year round. Cotton is abundant just below the mountains in Georgia and Alabama. Added to all this, it lies in the heart of the best grain-growing district of the Union. It therefore has all the materials and all the natural power at hand, and lacks only enterprise and capital to make it a great manufacturing as well as a great agricultural region.—Lockport, N. Y. Jour.

Why the War goes on.—The soldiers at Helena, in Arkansas, used to amuse the inhabitants of that place, on their first arrival, by telling them yarns, of which the following is a sample;

'Some time ago Jeff. Davis got tired of the war, and invited President Lincoln to meet him on neutral ground to discuss terms of peace. They met accordingly, and after a talk, concluded to settle the war by dividing the territory and stopping the fighting. The North took the Northern States, and the South the Gulf and sea-board Southern States. Lincoln took Texas and Missouri, and Davis Kentucky and Tennessee; so that all were parceled off excepting Arkansas. Lincoln did n't want it—Jeff. would n't have it. Neither would consent to take it, and on that they split, and the war has been going on ever since.'

Double Wages no Advance.—A contractor in the Scottish highlands, says a cotemporary, was waited upon by a deputation from his workers, to request him to make 'no a pit o' difference in the wages, but shust a wee shynge in the time for paying.' On cross-questioning the deputies, he found they wanted to be paid weekly instead of fortnightly, but they also wanted the fortnight's wages weekly. 'Why, my lads,' said the contractor, 'you are just demanding exactly double wages.' 'Hoots, no, sir!' said one of the deputation, 'it's shust as more as less as the same wedges, put you must shust paid us twice as faster as evermore.' After a little parleying, the contractor got his Celtic logicians to resume work at a trifling advance.

The Hero of the Commissary Department.—During the dark days of the siege, when food and forage were scarce, and the ghastly corpses and bleached skeletons of starved mules lined the roads thereabouts, General Grant and Quartermaster-General Meigs arrived in Chattanooga. Taking an airing on horseback one afternoon, they passed the carcass of a huge mule lying by the roadside, whose 'ill savor went up' before and around them. The hero of Vicksburg removed his briar-root from his lips, and remarked sorrowfully: 'Ah, General, there lies a dead soldier of the Quartermaster's Department.' 'Yes, General,' replied the Quartermaster-General, in subdued tones, 'in him you see the ruling passion strong in death exemplified, for the old veteran has already assumed the offensive.'

The Fremont Movement.—It is believed in Washington that the leaders of the Fremont faction have determined to organize in every election district throughout the North, irrespective of the present Republican organization, with a view to run the Pathfinder as a candidate, whether Mr. Lincoln is nominated by the June Convention or not.
